

The satisfaction of basic needs is essential to survival. They prevent a person from hunger or living on the streets. However, people require and have the right to more than just basic needs. In 1976, Canada and the provinces ratified the United Nations International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, to ensure that every Canadian, as well as civil and political rights, can enjoy economic, social and cultural rights. Individuals have rights to take part in the larger society, to work and have the opportunity to secure social and economic well-being. To engage in and contribute to society, individuals must have both their civil and economic needs met.
